POLICE SENT AFTER BURGLARS ON FIFTH AVENUE

Summoned to Residence of Late Copper King Daly's Widow.

Following a loud ring on the telenone at Police Headquarters early to day, an excited woman's voice said to oliceman Ryan, in charge of the bu-

"This is Mrs. Marcus Daly. Please send the police here at once. Three burglars are breaking into my residence, it No. 726 Fifth avenue. I wish you yould waste no time."

Ryan quickly communicated with ergt. Fay at the East Fifty-first street

"Get your men around to Mrs. Daly's at once," he said. "There are three burglars there, and you had better take plenty of policemen.

Roundsman Hallahan and two policemen were sent running. They did not have time to wait for the patrol wagon of reserves which was ordered out.

When Hallahan and his men arrived at the mansion of the late copper king carriage was drawn up at the door. Iwo young women had just alighted, nd, as the three men in uniform rushed up, the door was opened by a sleepy butler. Before it could be closed the police had pushed their way into the ouse. The two young women stood back affrighted and the butler quaked

"Where are those burglars?" asked the roundsman. "What! Burglars?" the butler man-

ged to blurt out when he could gain

Just then the patrol wagon, filled with reserves, rattled up to the front of the house, stopped, and the men piled out. When the policemen crowded into the louse they insisted on making a search. hey were told that there was no burglar in the place; but this did not satisfy them.

The belief is that either some practical joker was busy, or that one of the servants in the Daly home became frightened Juring the early morning hours.

in the County Court and bell was imposed.

Former Sheriff William J. Buttling, at one time a Republican leader of Kings County, consented to go on Milan's bond, and while the court was awaiting the arrival of Judge Frederick E. Crane. Buttling and Milan sat within the rail chatting and laughing.

Jay S. Jones, who represented the Attorney-General, asked that bail be set at $25,000, but Judge Crane said that in his opinion $90,000 bail, or $10,000 in each case, would be sufficient. "If you were to be brought to trial within a few days." Judge Crane said, "I would commit you to jail, but in the circumstances, as you may not be tried for a month, I think you should be admitted to bail."

When the formalities of signing the bonds were completed Milan and Mr. Buttling left the court-room together. Milan may be tried on or before March 19.

Last week Detectives Cary, McCufferty and Rhesame struck a clue. They found that a certain negro was spending a good deal of money, and they began to shadow him. Their suspicions grew until they finally made the arrest. Sadel declared that the stuff had been given him by two other negroes for security for a loan. He led the detectives to a loft, where they found the bulk of the stolen property. Most of the jewelry had been pawned.
